Chief Owner of Remington Co. Has Already Cleared Two Millions by Deal.

YORK, Oct. 22. - Partly through foresight, Marcellus Hartley Dodge, young owner of the major part of the Remington Arms Union Metal-Cartridge Company has cleared $2,000,000 by cornering the market in munitions making machines, according to a Bridgeport dispatch in the New York World today.

Mr. Dodge has still in his possession machines that cost $1,250,000 when the prices were slow, and which he is holding for further rises in the mar-

These facts became known following These facts became known following the sale of a large consignment of machinery by Mr. Dodge, and their authenticity is vouched for by persons involved in the deal.

Clamor for Machinery.

Mr. Dodge is being beneged by manufacturers clamoring to rmachinery. He is selling it at from 50 to 100 per cent more than he paid for it.

He is virtually the only dealer that can fill an order on demand. Machine manufacturers will not promise to de-liver within less than two years in many cases. The demand greatly ex-many cases. The demand greatly exceeds the supply.

When the European war started Mr. Dedge began plans for a huge riflemaking plant in Bridgeport and for uig additions to the Union Metallic Cartridge Company, a family property.

There are eighteen big factories in the Remington Arms Company plant here which he built, and more than 160 units. To equip the plant he bought huge lots of machinery, before the boom had hit of machinery, before the boom had hit other sections of the country, and man-ufacturers began converting their Construction under way, Mr. Dodge received so many orders from abroad that he resolved to double his pro-that he resolved to double his projected plant. He bought every piece of efficient machinery available, and put in orders for nearly three times the amount he has used.

A year ago Bridgeport became so glutted with munitions workers it could hold no more. There were not houses enough for them. They established tent colonies, but this mode of living was soon abandoned. Mr. Dodge realized he could not import thousands of workers more with no place to house them.

He abandoned his plan to double the Remington plant. As his machinery orders were filled he stored the machines. At a special meeting of the directors of the Remington property of the Remington arms Union Metallic Cartridge Company, it was voted to hold the machines until the autumn of 1916 because prices aiready were soaring.

Stored Thousands.

The big factory of the Handy & Harman Company in Bridgeport, was leased. Several thousand standard ma-chines equipped with adapters for mu-chines equipped with adapters for munitions are stored there. Their value is estimated at $1,600 each.

Lofts in Bridgeport and Stamford have been hired and the machines are being stored as fast as the orders are filled.

With virtually a corner in the market, Mr. Dodge is now dictating terms to the Russian government, which finds him the only dealer in America who can supply on demand. England and the United States have been canvassed in vain by the Russians, who are planning a munitions plant to cover twelve acres. munitions plant to cover twe Mr. Dodge has already shipped some machines to the Russians and will ship more.

One big munitions factory, it became known today, has paid the Remington interests, of which Mr. Dodge is 30 per cent owner, $950,000 for machines.
